

SEEKING INFORMATION

CURTIS DEAN ANDERSON

Northern California

Photograph taken in 1999

Photograph taken in 1983

Example of 1977 Chevy Sedan

Example of 1997 Toyota Truck

DETAILS

The FBI is seeking the public's assistance in identifying alleged victims of convicted killer Curtis Dean Anderson, who died while serving his prison sentence. Anderson was convicted and sentenced to over 300 years in prison for the 1999 kidnapping and murder of 7-year-old Xiana Fairchild in Vallejo, California. He was unable to escape. Anderson was interviewed by FBI agents in November of 2007, and confessed to murdering eight victims in the United States, including the child. Anderson also confessed to two murders in Mexico, but did not provide any information on those victims.

The following is a list of the stateside victims' descriptions given by Anderson in chronological order:

Late 1984: Victim #1 was described as a female "runaway" in her late teens/early 20s. Anderson allegedly met and killed her and then disposed of the body. She was a young female hitchhiker in her late teens, whom Anderson claimed he picked up on a road near the northeast side of Clearlake a few days after his escape.

Early 1985: Victim #3 was a female in her late teens, also residing in the Marysville area, who was possibly a runaway from Oregon.

November 1986: Victim #4 was about 21 years old. She was a light-skinned Black female whom Anderson met in a bar frequented by African-American men. Anderson claimed this occurred about 10 days after he was paroled from San Quentin State Prison. Anderson allegedly killed her and disposed of the body in a field.

June 1988: Victim #5 was Amber Swartz-Garcia, who Anderson said was standing on a street in Pinole, California, when he physically forced her into a car.

1988/1989: Victim #6 was allegedly a Navajo Indian woman about 23 to 24 years old. Anderson claimed he picked her up coming out of a bar near Benson, Arizona.

In 1989, Anderson received a ticket while driving a two-door, brown, 1977 Chevy sedan.

February or March 1997: Victim #7 was a Black/Hispanic female in her early 20s with noticeable "junkie tracks" on her arms who went by the name of [redacted]. She was as being frequented by Hispanics. This bar was located under Highway 87 in San Jose, California, near a bowling alley. After killing her, he allegedly disposed of the body in California. During this incident, Anderson stated he had been driving a black Toyota truck from his "Parts Company".

December 1999: Victim #8 was Xiana Fairchild, who disappeared on December 9, 1999.

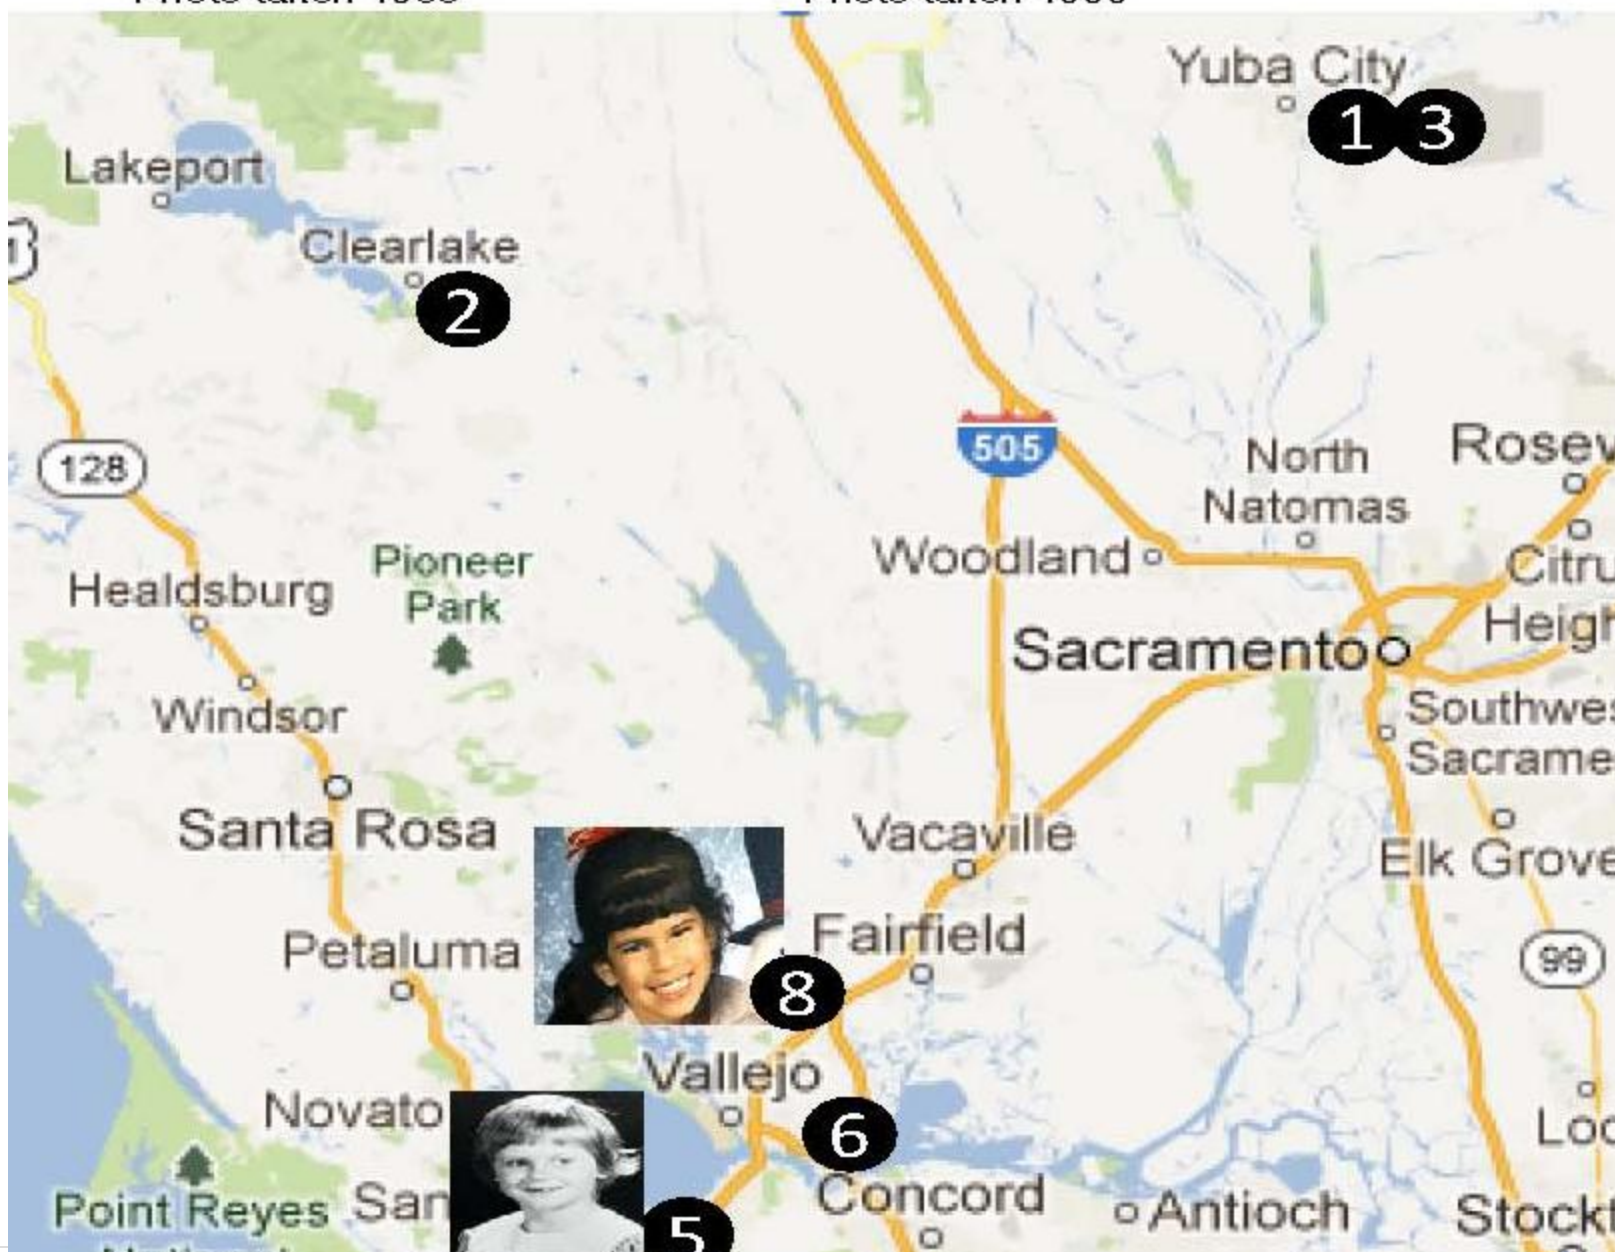

ALLEGED MURDER V CURTIS DEAN ANI

Photo taken 1983

Photo taken 1999

If you have any information concerning this case or the identity of the alleged victims, please call the FBI Toll-Free tip line at 1-800-CALL-FBI (1-800-225-5273). You may also contact your local FBI office , or the nearest American Embassy or Consulate.

Field Offices: San Francisco, Sacramento